

New Year, New Possibilities

William Lansbury

Friday 6 to Friday 27 January

It does not matter if it is Hamilton against Verstappen or Hawthorn against Moss, motor racing has always been full of high-octane emotion.

Do we love racing for the sound and spectacle of the machinery or are we more intrigued by the clash of personalities?

There have been moments when sportsmanship and a sense of fair play has come before victory at any cost. Stirling Moss helped Mike Hawthorn not be disqualified from the 1958 Portuguese Grand Prix.

Hawthorn went on to win the championship at Moss's expense - these values might seem absurd or even illogical today.

Perhaps we regard the 50s and 60s as a golden age but the competition has always been fierce with no quarter asked or given.

This on track rivalry reached its zenith with Alain Prost and Ayrton Senna. Probably two of the greatest racing drivers to have ever sat in a racing car.

You can put yourself behind the wheel and feel all of this excitement and tension as you look at the posters and photographs in this exhibition.
