

THE BIG SHOT: PHOTOGRAPHS BY GREG BRENNAN

SATURDAY 11 TO SATURDAY 18 JULY

Described by The Telegraph as a “gentleman’s photographer”, Greg Brennan has produced a body of work that stands at the intersection of politics, culture and celebrity. The established press photographer’s archive brings together a wide range of figures – from Lady Gaga to Jack Nicholson to Barack Obama – forming a library of public life spanning decades.

Although Brennan’s work has been widely published in colour, his black-and-white portraiture remains central to his practice. Working quickly, often in unpredictable circumstances, Brennan has always strived to get the image that nobody else has. His renowned portrait of Queen Elizabeth II is exemplary in this respect, the culmination of 12 years of attempts to capture a photograph that closely resembled the postage stamp. It is now stored in Windsor Castle as part of the Royal Photographic Collection. The cover of his new book, Brennan’s iconic picture of Kate Moss, has been featured in The Guardian’s esteemed ‘My Best Shot’ column. Illustrious figures who have personally asked for copies of his photographs range from Michael Jackson to Bill Clinton.

The photographs featured in this exhibition are all selected from Brennan’s new book, The Big Shot: Photographs by Greg Brennan. Featuring accompanying narratives written by his son Dylan, the book features many of Brennan’s favourite images from his three-decade career, encompassing the diamonds of Hollywood, legends of the music and fashion realms, generational sportsmen, and the world’s most earth-shaking leaders.
